STONEWALL JACKSON.

We found him on the blood-stained field of Antietam—almost at the close of his career instead of at the beginning. The world knows how he fought there. We found him at Kernstown fighting one to four—fighting, falling back—grimly giving way to fight again. We saw him strike the Federal armies right and left in the valley and fill Washington with white faces. We found him at Fredericksburg on Lee's right—at Chancellorsville in Hooker's rear—at Manassas behind Pope—in his front. We found him at Gaines' Mill. Fate waited for him before striking a last blow. It was the hammer in his grasp which shattered the Federal position. Without him Longstreet and Hill would have been pressed back—routed—annihilated.

A Christian in his faith—a child in his sympathies—a general who cared not for the world's admiration so much as for the comfort of any single man who followed him in his wonderful marches. He had the courage of a lion and the heart of a woman. The pomp and glitter of war were not for him. His banners grew old and faded and shot-worn. His legions grew ragged and foot-sore and weary. No matter who flattered—Jackson had faith. No matter who hesitated—Jackson advanced. Fierce in the heat of battle, because it was his duty to kill, when the roar of cannon had died away the groans of the wounded reached a heart which had a throb for every groan.

Partisans may keep their bitterness of heart, but the world has spoken. The man whom they hate forgiving all. Struck down at Chancellorsville, amidst the roar of battle, he was removed to die amidst the softest peace. Strong men wept like children when they saw his last hour had come, but if they had a feeling of revenge, down under their sorrow, he had none. With malice toward none—with forgiveness for all, his life went out as his pale lips whispered:

"Let us cross over and rest under the shade of the trees!"

"And may he ever rest!"

LOTS OF FUN IN HIM.

One of the members of the Methodist Conference held in Detroit was out for a walk at an early hour one morning, and encountered a strapping big fellow who was drawing a wagon to a blacksmith shop.

"Catch hold here and help me down to the shop with this wagon, and I'll buy the whiskey," called the big fellow.

"I never drink," solemnly replied the good man.

"Well, you can take a cigar."

"I never smoke."

The man dropped the wagon tongue, looked hard at the member, and asked:

"Don't you chew?"

"No, sir, was the decided reply.

"You must be mighty lonesome," mused the teamster.

"I guess I'm all right; I feel first rate."

"I'll bet you even that I can lay you on your back," said the teamster.

"I never bet," said the clergyman.

"Come, now, let's warm up a little."

"I'm in a hurry."

"Well, let's take each other down for fun, then. You are as big as I am, and I give you the under hold."

"I never have fun," solemnly replied the member.

"Well, I'm going to tackle you anyhow. Here we go."

The teamster slid up and endeavored to get a back hold, but he had only just commenced his fun when he was lifted clear off the grass and slammed against a tree box with such force that he gasped a half a dozen times before he could catch his breath.

"Now, you keep away from me," exclaimed the minister, picking up his cane.

"Bust me if I don't," replied the teamster as he edged off. "What's the use in lying and saying you didn't have any fun in you, when you are chuck full of it? You wanted to break my back, didn't you?" Detroit Free Press.

SHE INSISTED ON HIS ENJOYING HIMSELF.

She would rather that he would go to the play than not, she said. She wanted him to enjoy himself. No one should say that his wife stood in the way of his having a good time; and indeed he needed relaxation. To be sure, she couldn't go with him, because she hadn't anything decent to wear, though that wasn't his fault, for his wages were small, and living cost so much nowadays. Even if she had clothes fit to be seen at the theatre, there was no one to leave the baby with, for they couldn't afford a nurse, as most other people could, but that must not keep him from going, as a man who works hard all day must have a change occasionally. She knew very well the neighbors would talk about his going to the theatre by himself, leaving his wife alone in the house, except the baby. And a fire might break out, or a burglar break in, but he mustn't let such thoughts disturb him, but watch the play and try and have a good time. She had thought of asking him for half a dollar, to get her poor dear mother a birthday present; but let it go now. A man could work so much better if he went out and enjoyed himself once in a while, and so she wanted him to go. Although she had heart disease and was liable to drop dead any minute, and the baby had symptoms of croup, yet he shouldn't stop at home on that account or let it worry him any while sitting in the theatre.

As everything seemed combined to make him have a good time in his little plan of relaxation at the play, we wonder he did not go, but he didn't, though he gave it up with a sigh, for it had been months since a ray of amusement had relieved the murky atmosphere of daily toil.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

CASTLE GARDEN IN 1850.

Castle Garden, which has been given over for many years to the invading hordes from Europe, was at one time (and to the present elder generation of New Yorkers it must seem not long ago) the most widely known and generally frequented place of popular amusement in the city. It began to be so used in the days when the lower part of Broadway and Greenwich street were fashionable, and when the Battery was the favorite promenade, the great walk being thronged on fair afternoons by elegant folk who took their daily needed "constitutional" of air and gossip. At Castle Garden were the grand exhibitions of fire-works; from Castle Garden balloons went up in the days when that peril supplied the craving for excitement now afforded by the flying trapeze; at Castle Garden the American Institute had its first fairs; at Castle Garden there were concerts and theatrical performances and operas; and there Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was performed, and well performed, at a time whereof those who went with large eyes and long ears to hear it at Steinway Hall, big with a consciousness of first discovery of its greatness, have no memory.—Richard Grant White.

UNDERSTANDING MEN'S NATURES.

About mid afternoon yesterday a citizen who pulls down the scales at one hundred and ninety-six pounds descended the first flight of stairs beyond the Post Office in just the same manner that a bag of oats would have chosen, and when he brought up at the foot he was in no frame of mind to chip in anything for the heathen in Africa. The first citizen who arrived on the spot knew what his duty required of him on such an occasion, and he smilingly remarked:

"I don't believe you can improve on the old way."

The second citizen passing was in a hurry, but he knew that he must halt and inquire:

"Like that any better than coming down the way the rest of us do?"

The third citizen had business at the Post Office, but he turned aside, cleared his throat, and remarked:

"Evidently fell down stairs! Curious how it sets the blood to circulating. Some of you had better see if his nose is broken—good-bye."

There was a fourth spectator, and he slowly entered the doorway, bent over the victim, and remarked:

"I'd have given a dollar to see him come down! He's one of the sort who bump every stair."

The fifth man was about to add his mite when the victim rose up. His elbows were skinned, his nose barked, his coat torn and his back sand-papered the whole length, but he was a man who had traveled. He knew that everybody in the crowd was hoping to see him jump up and down and shake his fists, and paw the air, and to hear him declare that he would lick all the men who could be packed in a ten-acre lot, and therefore he brought a sweet smile to his face, lifted his hat like a perfect gentleman, and limped up stairs with the bland remark:

"Stubbed my toe as I came in the door, you know, and came near falling in a heap."—Detroit Free Press.

Let your great Physician heal you in His own way. Only follow His directions and take the medicine which He prescribes, and then quietly leave the result with Him.—Payson.

D. HARTER'S IRON TONIC

A combination of Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of Iron that will not blacken the teeth, no characteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and all impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and invaluable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation known to me, and shall continue as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice. DR. ROBERT SAMUELS,

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 5th, 1881. 2104 Wash Avenue.

It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.
